Windup tin toy cars were the preeminent type of action toy during the 1920's and 30's. Despite their immense popularity, the ravages of time, neglect and misuse have left few behind. Consequently, they have become highly collectible with several virtually impossible to obtain for under $7,500.00.

MTH is proud to offer two of the most popular windup cars from this era, the Amos 'n' Andy Fresh-Air Taxi™ and the Hi-Way Henry™ jalopy. Both are limited production, exact copies of the original pieces that are sure to please the most demanding of collectors.

KINGSBURY FIREHOUSE AND PUMPER

Our early manufacturing years focused on brightly colored tinplate reproductions from the pre-World War II Lionel® era. It is this manufacturing experience that has allowed us to expand into the tin-plate toy era with our debut product, the 1911 Kingsbury Firehouse and Pumper truck.

The 19 inch long stamped steel firehouse was a staple in the Wilkens-Kingsbury toy line from 1911 to 1930. Automatic doors were controlled by an alarm box, mounted on the right side of the station. When the alarm was sufficiently wound it could be activated by a concealed trigger. The resulting action caused the bell to ring and the two front doors to fly open. The pre-sound Pumper Truck would then roll out with its bell a-ringing!

FEATURING

- Stamped Steel Construction
- Baked Enamel Paint Finish in Original Colors
- Painstakingly Crafted to Exact Details of the Original
- One-Year Limited Warranty

- Wind Up Clock Work Mechanism
- Firehouse Measures 19 Inches x 10 Inches High
- Pumper Truck Measures Almost 10 Inches Long

The Pumper Truck, also formed from stamped steel construction, is mounted on cast iron spoked wheels and was powered by Kingsbury's patented windup spring motor mechanism, making the Pumper Truck one of the first toys to enter the motorized age.

Our reproduction of the Kingsbury Firehouse and Pumper Truck is an exact copy of the original, right down to the windup clockwork mechanisms and paint color. Fully operational, the set makes a welcome addition to any toy collector of pre-war stamped steel and tinplate toys. What's more, the Firehouse's size puts it completely at home with pre-war Lionel standard gauge trains and accessories as well.
